Knowledge, skills and experiences of our instructors, all of whom share a common focus on relationships - those between family members (when we talk about family therapy) and those relationships within pedagogical or educational groups, when focusing on work with groups.

In the way the programme is designed and structured, it offers opportunities to discover sources and ways of support for teachers, pedagogues and other professionals.

The methodology of work used throughout all the modules activates the relational potential of participants in such a way that their learning about relationships is theoretical, practical and personal.

Our experience shows that through personal engagement, taking responsibility for being part and participating in a group, and through competent leadership, groups become a safe place for individual and collective processes.
